BALLOONING IS RARE SPORT SAYS BLONDIN

Aeronaut Will Make Long Distance Flight at Teritorial Fair.

Aeronaut Joseph A. Blondin, who has been in the city the past few days conferring with the territorial officials in regard to operating a captive balloon at the fair, said, in speaking of his experiences as an aeronaut:

"It is two years since I have been actively engaged in ballooning, but now I am ready to become an active aeronaut again. In the last two years I have been in the southwest prospecting in the mountains and wild regions of the territory. I am a member of the Aero Club of America, in fact I am a charter member of the club."

The year book of the Aero Club of America has this to say of its object: "The promotion of a science, organization or club composed in whole or in part of persons owning aeronautic inventions for personal or private use. To advance the development of the science of aeronautics and kindred sciences. To encourage and organize aerial navigation and excursions, conferences, exhibitions, congresses and races. To develop the breeding and training of carrier pigeons. To hold, maintain and conduct games, meets, contests, exhibitions, races, and other amusements or travel through the air or otherwise." Other objects are mentioned in the year book, but these are the most important.

The membership of the club includes the most famous aeronauts of this and other countries in addition to many men of wealth or science interested in the aeronautic profession. Such names are on the membership roll as Col. John Jacob Astor, Alexander Graham Bell, O. H. Belmont, Gustav L. M. Bonfanti, Peter Cooper Hewitt, A. Roy Knabenshue, Alberto Santos-Dumont, Dr. Julian P. Thomas, William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., and many others of prominence in the affairs of the world.

Ballooning Not Dangerous.
"It is a mistaken idea that ballooning is a dangerous sport," continued Aeronaut Blondin. "The balloon, in the hands of a competent pilot, has been in existence eleven years, has a record of over 3,000 ascensions by its members and not one fatality and but few serious accidents. If the balloon is put to rest on the ground, it is a matter of seconds to get it up again. It is a matter of seconds to get it up again. It is a matter of seconds to get it up again."

Hot Air Balloons Unsafe.
"With the hot air balloon the case is entirely different. The list of accidents and deaths is a long one. This form of ballooning and from the various parachute stunts, is appalling. The death of Paul Noquet, who made a daring flight in a gas balloon last year and landed on the marshes of Long Island in the night, was due not to the balloon but to heart failure, or some cause which was aggravated by the exposure and exertions of the aeronaut in trying to reach land."

Will Take Long Flight.
"At the close of fair week I propose to take a free flight in my balloon and try for a long distance record. Then, if I can get there in time, I hope to be present at the Bennett balloon race, which is scheduled to take place at St. Louis, October 19. I will not be a contestant in that race as one for that part has already been chosen. In making a free flight from Albuquerque I undertake to do what few aeronauts would dare. In fact, it would be folly for the average balloonist to take such a flight in a thinly settled mountain country such as this. The hazards are very great. One might land miles from any water or be subjected to exposure and accident which might easily prove fatal. My reason for my two years of experience as a prospector in different mountain regions of the southwest I feel reasonably safe in undertaking the trip. Experience has taught me to care for myself in this sort of country and I risk less danger than would otherwise be the case."

Dangerous Venture.
"The prevailing winds at high altitudes are from the south or southwest. Thus my proposed flight would make me drift into Colorado, Kansas or Nebraska. If I should land in some rugged mountain district of the first named state I might be put to serious hardship before being rescued."

Will Go Alone.
"Yet I must take the trip alone. The weight of ballast, which another person beside myself would displace, is of more importance to the aeronaut than the society of a fellow creature. I will carry about 700 pounds of net ballast, that is, sand, and I will throw out as much as I need in passing. This sand is carried in bags of definite weights and dispensed with in tiny quantities, for the most part. A mere spoonful of sand thrown out will cause a very susceptible rise of the balloon. Long distance ballooning depends upon the aeronaut's economy in the use of ballast and experience in manipulation of the gas valve."

Big Balloon.
"The balloon I shall have, most probably will have a displacement of less than 20,000 cubic feet. It will be charged with hydrogen gas. The theoretical density of hydrogen is one-fourth that of the atmosphere, and in practice it is only one-sixth that of air. It is on the latter scale that the aeronaut figures. In round figures the weight of 1,000 cubic feet of air at sea level is 13 pounds. Deducting one-sixth of that, which is the density of hydrogen, there is about 65 pounds per 1,000 cubic feet left, which is the lifting power of hydrogen at sea level. At this altitude, a mile high approximately, the aeronaut can figure a loss of 25 per cent in the lifting power of his balloon at sea level, which, of course, is due to the diminished specific gravity in the air at this altitude. Including myself, instruments and ballast, my balloon will carry at the start about 1,000 pounds."

"In addition to the ordinary methods of maintaining a balloon in the air (ballast and manipulation of gas valve), I will apply two new methods of my own invention."
Aeronaut Blondin is now preparing a paper to submit to the Aero Club of America, in which he makes these inventions public property for the benefit of the aeronautic profession.

JOSE PEREA WALKED 75 MILES TO HIS MINES

Aged Man Who Disappeared Friday, Found in Manzano District.

Jose E. Perea, the aged man who disappeared from his home on Mountain road last Friday, was found Monday night by his nephew, Timothy Chavez, of 1013 North First street, who drove to the mines owned by the old man in the Manzano mountains 75 miles southeast of this city, to which point Perea, with an occasional short ride from a passing rig, had walked after he left this city. Mr. Chavez brought Perea to his home last night.

Mr. Perea was fatigued considerably and seems ill, though he is no worse than before his disappearance. His strength had been shaken considerably by his long trip, but otherwise he is in fair condition. His mind is not so clear today, that Perea is not mentally unbalanced, but suffers in great weakness caused by age and illness.

Mr. Chavez drove to the site of the old man's mine Monday, it being a very long day's trip, and he found Perea without difficulty. The latter was looking over the diggings and running new work, but readily consented to return home.

On account of Perea's never having gone away before without notice to his relatives of his intentions, it was at first feared that he had met with foul play or been overcome by illness somewhere, but his discovery sets such fears aside.

'TRINIDAD AFRAID' SAYS BROWN MANAGER

Will Not Come to Albuquerque for Fear of Defeat According to Local Players.

As a result of the McIntosh Browns being unable to play the Trinidad team Saturday and Sunday, the Trinidad newspapers are publishing a lot of "cold feet" and are afraid to meet the Trinidadians.

Manager O. A. Matson, of the Browns, was shown an article in the Trinidad Chronicle of yesterday, which claimed that the Browns were afraid to visit Trinidad. He said:

"Our team is made up of amateur baseball players, while all of their players are semi-professionals drawing salaries, but even though they place us at a disadvantage in class, we are more than willing to play them and I feel assured that the Trinidadians are the ones that have the cold feet."

Challenged Month Ago.
"We challenged them a month ago, but they have been making excuses, saying that they could not come here, but insisted upon our coming here, on some Saturday and Sunday. In offering them sixty per cent of the receipts to come here, we explained why we could not play them in their own town. It begins to look like the Trinidadians do not care to play anyone who will not come to their town."

Roy McDonald, the catcher and captain of the Browns, said today:

"Why, the Trinidadians actually act like ninnyes. Who ever said that we were afraid to play them is a fabricator of a large type. Trinidad is too far away for us to play a Sunday game as several of our best players myself cannot get away from business on Mondays, and we cannot get back before 12:30 p. m. Monday afternoon, a good five hours too late for me."

Trinidad Welcome at Fair.
The Trinidad Advertiser is authority for the statement that no Colorado teams will be invited to meet at the territorial fair. This is not true, according to authorities here, who state that the Trinidad team or any team from Arizona or New Mexico can enter.
